the problem

is that people get caught up in monkey see, monkey do.

all ideologies are in a sense tools for dissecting the world, they try to explain the real via models, and abstracts. mimesis one such theory, i don't totally agree with it, but it can be useful to explain some things.

living life means making choices, life is all about choices the concept of this notion of monkey see monkey do is so powerful, we named it as mimetic desire.

essentially we desire that others desire, ever notice how women get jealous when one of their friends has a boyfriend.

man is the creature who does not know what he desires
